“The pack really excited me. The research included is wonderful. The range of activities is great and the enthusiastic delivery was welcomed.”
(Head teacher, Fife)

Training

a one day course based on the pack

Inclusive education in primary schools:
Supporting children with social, emotional and behavioural difficulties

Our resource pack is crammed full of ideas, activities, worksheets, questions for reflection, current research, policy and legislation and much more. On its own, it's a great tool for schools. We know that even great resources can sit on shelves unused. That's why we've developed training to accompany it.

"This (training) course has really made me think! I thoroughly enjoyed all aspects...it was very well delivered and challenged my own thoughts, experiences and opinions... I could relate to the case studies and found the ideas, activities very relevant. I'm definitely going to implement strategies."

(Head teacher of a Fife primary school)

Our training day will give you the opportunity to:

- 🕒 Explore what is meant by inclusion and SEBD and the issues for mainstream schools
- 🕒 Learn how to navigate the pack
- 🕒 Try out some of the activities and concepts
- 🕒 Reflect on how the pack can be used in your school

As with so much of teaching, it is not simply doing the activities that will make a difference but how the activity is done. Our one day training programme allows us to explore this.

However, the best training should suit your needs so we are flexible. So as well as having the one day training, we can offer:

- 🕒 Training at different levels, to individual schools or to local authorities, as well as to students in universities and colleges
- 🕒 Training on the whole resource or on individual strategies and techniques
- 🕒 Consultancy to really focus on specific issues for individual schools or authorities

The day training has been piloted with education staff in Fife Council. We have also contributed to relevant modules at the Moray House School of Education at Edinburgh University, at both postgraduate and undergraduate level.

Don't let the pack gather dust on the book shelf. Make it work!
